Voices from the Past

Each veteran's story is a testament to their indomitable spirit and unwavering patriotism. Through their words, we gain an unvarnished perspective on what it meant to be a Mexican American in the midst of a global conflict.

Joe Delgado: "My father and uncles fought in World War I, so I felt a sense of duty to follow in their footsteps. I couldn't stand to see the Nazis and fascists trampling over the world." (Company A, 141st Infantry Regiment, 36th Division)

Lorena Nava: "I was a nurse at Fort Dix. I had a brother who fought in the Pacific, and I felt like I needed to do my part, too. I saw firsthand the sacrifices these men were making, and I wanted to support them in any way I could." (U.S. Army Nurse Corps)

Rudolfo "Rudy" Martinez: "When we got to France, we faced intense fighting. I was wounded in the leg, but I didn't want to leave my comrades behind. I remember thinking, 'We're here to fight for our country, and we're going to do it together.'" (37th Infantry Division, 9th Army)
